REASON FOR ALLOWANCE

4. The following is an examiner's statement of reason for allowance:

The cited prior art taken alone or in combination fail to teach, in combination with the other claimed limitations, a method for remote incremental program verification for receiving content verified by one content provider; installing the content on a resource-constrained device; disabling subsequent installation of content on resource-constrained device; and issuing resource-constrained device to an end user. The content provider includes an applet provider, a device manufacturer, a device issuer and a trusted (or untrusted) post-issuance installer. The content includes at least one program unit, where each program unit comprises an Application Programming Interface (API) definition file and an implementation. Each API definition file defines items in its associated program unit that are made accessible to one or more other program units, and each implementation includes executable code corresponding to the API definition file. The executable code includes type specific instructions and data, as recited in the independent claims.

Conclusion

5. The prior art made or record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure.
